CEDAR CHESTS

A beautiful gift for her graduation a chest ... steeped in the romance of the past

DOWRY CHEST DOWLING by LANE

EXACTLY AS ILLUSTRATED

Sold on Easy Payments. Make your selection now and it will be delivered at Graduation Time.

The design of this chest reverts to an old dowry chest said to have been used in the Court of King James I in about the year 1620.

According to the story, one of the court attaches, a Sir Henry Dowling, had one daughter whom he loved very dearly.

This daughter, Amelia, had been sent to a convent on the continent. When she was ready to return to England, Sir Henry, in true fatherly fashion, desired to commemorate her home coming with a gift.

So he called in the artisans and he ordered them to make a chest which should surpass all others in beauty. He selected the wood, watched the work step by step, and finally when the chest was completed, nobody in all the Court had ever seen one lovelier.

Amelia came home. She accepted the chest with heart overflowing with joy. And, according to the story which ends just as all such stories should, she married, settled down and lived happily ever

The gift from her father then passed on down through many generations finally to bestow its wealth of beauty and romance upon this modern adaptation, the Dowling Hope Chest, especially designed for the Girl Graduate by Lane the world's foremost cedar chest maker.

This chest has the loveliest of Oriental and American walnut veneers on the outside and the choicest of aromatic red cedar heartwood on the inside, the cedar being 34 inch thick in accordance with the U.S. Government recommendations for a moth killing cedar chest. Heavily paneled top richly embellished with carved mouldings. The chest is roomy, capacious, inviting - indeed a charming treasure to hand down to future generations.

We shall be most happy to have you inspect this chest. For the Girl Graduate—for any girl or young woman — no finer or more acceptable gft is easily conceivable. The price is $35. Convenient terms may be arranged, if desired. We show many other pleasing Lane models.

The modern equivalent of the Roman forum is the is the prime purpose of these clubs it is probable that the real reason for their existence is the desire and the necessity of citizens to talk things over in groups. Noon and proverbial middle-of-the-day hunger are adequate excuses for the maintenance of these gatherings.

It is probably safe to say that one half of the community enterprise is conceived, or at least aided in some way or other in the luncheon clubs of a city. They rank all the way from the "old gang" that meets in a room with a 35-cent outlay to exclusive gatherings in the vaulted ballrooms of best hotels, but all have the same fundamental idea-a chance to get together.

Doubt In High Places

The current issue of Time carries a letter from a subscriber who wants inside information on the authenticity of the articles which Mr. Coolidge wrote "On Entering and Le ving the Presidency." The inquirer is skeptical of Mr. Coolidge's ability and suggests that the articles were written by a secretary, or by Ray Long, editor of Cosmopolitan, and printed with the former president's approval.

Long, in a sworn statement, denies the charges, and, as far as possible, clears Mr. Coolidge's reputation as a writer. He says that no "ghost writer" could have put the sincerity into the stories which the writer did.

It is a charge which has been made many times before, and, with all respect to Mr. Coolidge, in more important circumstances. There are still dozens of scholars who are delving into records and stretching their imaginations in an effort to prove that William Shakespeare received aid in the preparation of the plays which have made him the world's greatest poet and playright. They have been at their destructive task since 1616 and their contention is still without support. Even if the versatile Ben Johnson did help William Shakespeare, the remaining records of their great work would be none the less

There is every reason to believe that Mr. Coolidge wrote his own stories. If he did not, some writer deserves a lot of praise that he is not getting. Fortunately, it would be difficult to convice the public that there is any excuse for doubt in the case and there will remain the mute testimony of the frank Yankee sincerity with which the articles are strengthened.

There is no way to prevent skepties from removing the cloaks of the dead in their muck-raking biographies, but any attempt to change the public's conviction of former President Coolidge's sincerity by insinuation will be coldly received.

HASKIN DAILY LETTER

- By Frederick J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 1 .- Did Premier Clemeneau of France actually seek the removal of General Pershing as Commander of the American Expeditionary forces during the autumn of 1918? When the report that such an incident took place was cabled to the states from Paris, a few weeks after the death of Marshal Foch, a prompt search of the records of the army war college in Washington was made to reveal all official records bearing on such an episode. Officials of the army already knew the answer, but newspapers and other interested parties were quick to seek all of the available facts. The report, sensational in the form in which it appeared in print, reveals so much of the history of our greatest military exploit, that it is worth while examining exactly what the records reveal. The mere answer to the question of whether or not Clemencau sought Pershing's removal is only a fragment of the story, but it is the fragment which brings the whole story to light, and may be considered first.

The answer is in two parts: First-Clemenceau never actually sought the removal of General Pershing. Second-Clemenceau probably did discuss with Marshal Foch the possibility of seeking Pershing's removal, and Foch probably advised against such a procedure.

The mere possibility, or probability, that the Premier of France talked about trying to remove the American expeditionary force and it; achievements which is new to the minds of many Americans. E. F. was doing.

That Clemenceau never sought to get Pershing reretary, hastened ot deny it. Clemenceau has not bothered to deny it, nor has Pershing. An examination of the basis of the recent reports from Paris reveals that Frequent accidents at St. Clair and McKinnon avenues Raymond Recouly, the French wrtier whose forthcoming does not say that Clemenceau ever asked Pershing's removal. He says only that Clemenceau talked about such move with Marshal Foch.

Thus we quickly conclude that no actual steps were taken. The tale goes that about the end of September, 1918, four or five days after the American First Army started its greatest and final battle in the Meuse-Argonne sector, Premier Clemenceau started to visit the American front. On this visit his automobile was caught in a traffic jam close to the American zones near the town of Vareness. EDNA FERBER'S STORY SCREENED

Those who have read the Edna Ferber story, "Mother Knows Best," visualized on the screen by Fox Films. will recall that a vaudeville duo, "Ben and Bessie," were very colorful characters in the development of the story. In the picture, which opens a four-day engagement at the Ceramic theater today, Joy Auburn and Stuart Erwin portray the roles of the song and dance team. It is of interest to know that Joy Auburn is a recent recruit from Broadway musicals, including "Scandals" and "Follies," while Erwin was featured in the original production of "The Show Off" during its original run on the big street.

In "Mother Knows Best" the lead-ing roles are enacted by Madge Bellamy, Louise Dresser and Barry Nor ton. The scenario is by Marion Orth, who adapted "Street Angel" to the screen, and the direction of John Bly-

Standard Oil of Ohio Brings New Lubricant to Ohio Motorists

40° below zero temperature utilized to produce 100% Paraffin Base

OIL FREE FROM HARMFUL WAX

ODAY marks a step forward in Ohio motor lubrication. Today Petroleum's latest development is made available all over Ohio—the New Sohio Motor Oil.

We learned of a new refining process discovered by a distinguished petroleum technologist. Standard Oil of Ohio sought out this scientist. Now Ohio motorists are offered the results of this remarkable discovery—a 100% paraffin base lubricating oil free from harmful wax— New Sohio Motor Oil.

Petroleum's Stubborn Mystery Solved
The Petroleum industry has long recognized the necessity of producing an oil free from harmful wax. To obtain this complete separation of excess wax from oil it is necessary to chill the oil to a temperature never before believed possible. Our new process accomplishes this purpose.

By an ingenious device, oil is chilled to a temperature 40 degrees below zero.

At this degree of extreme cold centrifugal action is employed to remove the harmful wax content of the oil. The separation is complete. Countless tests in our own laboratories prove beyond the question of a doubt that this new process does produce an oil free from harmful wax.

ADVANCED NEW PROCESS REMOVES WAX AT 40°

BELOW ZERO

Excess wax in motor oil causes trouble.

Most manufacturers de-wax by centrifugal of good oils now de-wax by centrifugal action, employing the widely known principle of the farm cream separator. But the method used in the manufacture of Sohio Motor Oil performs this vital operation at the extreme temperature of 40° below zero, producing oil free from harmful wax. The results:

- 1 Little or no carbon.
- 2 Flexible viscosity—perfect motor lubrication at all temperatures.
- 3 Perfect piston seal—full power and least danger of oil dilution.

What wax-free oil means to your motor

It means a decided decrease in carbon formation. Excess wax is the basis of almost all carbon formation—the elimination of harmful wax in the New Sohio Motor Oil substantially decreases carbon formation. This is particularly important in high-compression motors because added carbon cuts down combustion space.

It means effective lubrication over wider temperature range. Wax doesn't allow flexibility. Regardless of the quick changes in temperature so common in Ohio, your motor will at all times receive normal lubrication with the New Sohio Motor Oil.

Drive up to any of the more than 700 Red-Whiteand-Blue Standard service stations today—or to any one of the hundreds of dealers displaying New Sohio Motor Oil banners. Ask to have your crankcase drained and refilled with New Sohio Motor Oil.

Check your car's operation—you'll find your motor running quieter and cooler, your carbon formation diminished and your oil lasting longer.

Try the New Sohio Motor Oil—then watch your thermometer and your speedometer for the most convincing story of its superiority.

"My Nerves Were In Such a Terrible Condition That I Had Given Up Hope That There Was Any Help For Me," Says Mrs. Miller.

Women find Owa-Ton-Na a particularly helpful remedy in nervous rundown conditions because of the fact that it obtains results not through the use of doping, deadening, harmful drugs but through the elimination o harmful poisons and a restoration to normal activity of important vital organs. The good it does for eage health seekers in kidney, liver and stomach disorders, rheumatism, neu-ritis, nervousness and a general rundown condition of health is daily be ing told at Carnahan's Drug Store 114 East Sixth street by the laboratory representative who has seen case at ter case who have reported remarkable results.

Mrs. Malinda Miller, 208 E, 4th st., East Liverpool, tells of the remarkable good that Owa-Ton-Na has done for her in a condition which had defied all former treatments. She says; "I was just getting to the point where was a complete nervous wreck. NOW, a NEW SERIES of COMMERCIAL CARS and TRUCKS by CHRYSLER

NOW, in the New 1/2 - Ton Fargo Packet and in the 3/4-Ton Fargo Clipper -first of a new series of delivery trucks - Chrysler enters the commercial car field. Announcement of the 1-, 11/2and 2-Ton trucks will be made later.

The New Fargo Packet and Clipper bring to the business world commercial cars, designed and built for commercial purposes, which are in themselves advertisements of the progressiveness, high standing and efficiency of the merchants whom they serve.

In both the one-half and the threequarter ton capacities - four-cylinder and six-cylinder types - Fargo clearly establishes the results which artistic designing skill can produce in cars of strictly utilitarian purpose. Here, for the first time in standard production, you obtain the type of construction and the distinctive appearance you have in the past expected only in special custom-built commercial bodies.

To this entirely new phase of practical beauty, the New Fargo adds a new degree of economy in operation, dependability, service assurance and performance brought about by engineering developments in its "Silver-Dome" high-compression engine, using any gasoline.

We will gladly arrange to demonstrate the superiority of the Fargo - and to prove to you the economic advantages which Chrysler now makes available for your business cars.

Come in and inspect these two Fargo models and get the low prices. They are available with panel, screen, canopy or sedan bodies. Fargo dealers are in a position to extend the convenience of time payments.

A new Fargo 1-Ton truck will be announced soon; new 11/2-Ton and 2-Ton will follow.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Since the understanding is general that George H. Ruth, the well-known husband, wishes to be awarded a con-

Story of Adventurous Youth, Mystery, Fortune and a Girl.

By Herman Landon

"You gave me a shock tonight, Martenet," said the "I thought I was immune to shocks, butwell, it isn't every day you see some one you thought was dead.

Hannan smoked with outward placidity, but secretly he wondered what would happen to Horace Peters now that the hoax was exposed. "I'll settle with Peters later," said Mallingham, as if reading his thoughts. "For the present I'm concerned only with you. Guess why I'm paying you this visit."

"I haven't the least idea, Pelly."

"My name is Mallingham."

"I know." Hannan blew a cloud of cigarette smoke carelessly in the other's direction. "But to your friends you are Mally. I have heard that the surest way to offend a person you don't like is to mispronounce his name. I don't like you, and that's why I call you Pelly.

"You overestimate your importance, Martenet. Nothing you might say or do could possibly offend me. are too insignificant to be capable of giving me offense. I'll tell you why I am here. I'm going to kill you."

"Really, Pelly." For just an instant there was a wary flicker in Hannan's eyes, but the impudent, mocking smile do not leave his lips. "Do you know, the moment I saw you I suspected that's what you had in mind? Please don't kill me tonight, Pelly. Wait till tomorrow or the next day."

Mallingham leaned back and regarded him with a half contemptuous, half bewildered expression. Very casually, as if the object were of no more importance than a handkerchief, he pulled a small pistol from his pocket and placed it on his knee.

"Think I am joking?"

"You are, only you don't know it. The best jokes are the unconscious ones. Why don't you laugh at yourself, Pelly? Hear that noise? It's about a million tons of rock and gravel sagging on the roof and forming an airtight crust. If it doesn't crush us to death, it will suf-focate us. In a few hours we'll all be dead. And here you come with a pistol, trying to scare a man who knows he is going to die anyhow." Hannan laughed. "Oh, laugh," said Mallingham. "You haven't many Hannan lenaed over quickly and blew out the candle.

"Why—why did you do that, you fool?" demanded Mallingham a little unsteadily.

"To save the oxygen. The longer the oxygen lasts, the more laughs I'll hare."
"Have your little jokes. If you think you have gained anything by blowing out the candle, you are mistaken.

There are matches in my pocket. The moment you move from that cot, I shall strike one and shoot you dead. I mean that absolutely." "Mind if I lie down?" Hannan asked. The cot squeaked as he stretched himself out. "I can stand being bored if I am comfy." Mallingham muttered something under his breath

Presently he spoke again. "Know why I'm going to kill you, Martenet? Because I hate you."
"Hate me? Why on earth do you hate me, Pelly?"

"Because you are a Martenet. I hate you more particu-Jarly because you take after Old Winthrop. I am going to make a confession to you, a confession of weakness. It will be humiliating, but I shall wipe out the humiliation afterward by killing you. Your grandfather died seven years ago, but it seems the grave can't hold him. He is reaching out of the sod-confound him!-and meddling in the affairs of posterity. I run foul of him whichever way I turn. He's been mocking me, jeering at me, frustrating my plans. Oh, I know I talk like an imbecile. Well, Old Winthrop has made me feel like one. With his infernal contraptions he has warped my judgment till I can no longer trust my senses. He haunts all my waking and sleeping hours.

"He has made me stand in awe of things I should laugh at. He has put all sorts of crazy, morbid fancies in my mind. That's why I hate him, and that's why I'm going to kill you. Only tonight, for instance-"Well, Pelly, what about tonight?"

"I went to the iron door," said Mallingham. His voice was thick and hoarse, with an edge of malice and an undertone of dread. "I meant to open it, even if it should be my last act on earth. Believing we were all doomed anyway, I couldn't see it made any difference. I was keyed up to something heroic." He laughed ironically. "But Old Winthrop bamboozled me again, damn I was afraid of that clock over the door. Yes, admit it. I told you this was to be a confession of weak-ness. Afraid of a clock! I felt as if the ghost of Old Winthrop was in that clock, anmiating it with that diabolical personality of his. Oh, laugh if you like. I ough to laugh at my own idiocy and weakness, but I can't. Well, I opened the door a crack-

He laughed hoarsely. "Just a crack-that was all. I didn't get any farther. I heard a voice. It was your grandfather's voice. I would have known his voice among a million. It shouted a warning-told me I musn't enter until the clock stopped. It was a little too weird even for me, Martenet, hard-headed and practical though I am. It unnerved me completely. And there was that devilish clock ticking all the time. Well, all the moss-grown and hoary superstitions that have been handed down to us from the age of primitive man seemed to crystalize in my brain. At the moment I actually thought the voice was Old Winthrop's. Or rather, I felt it was, for my mind was not functioning. Later, thinking, it over, I knew the voice was not a human one It was a metallic imitation — another of Old Winthrop's contraptions. The fact remains that I was frightened away-frightened away by a dead man.

"You didn't go back again?"

"No, I didn't-and the only thing that kept me away was fear. It's no good reasoning about such a thing. That sort of fear doesn't spring from reason, but from instinct. I'm afraid of the clock, of the iron door, of whatever lurks behind that door. Have I debased myself enough? Is the picture sufficiently despicable? Well. let me tell you one thing. I'm going to steal a march on Old Winthrop's shost yet.'

'How are you going to do it, Pelly?" Hannan asked him with a return to his former flippancy. "There's a way to stop the clock and open the iron door safely."

"You tried it last night, didn't you?"

"How did you know? Oh, I suppose Peters told you something. But Peters was only guessing. Anyhow, the door can be opened. I opened it a crack tonight. And night before last some one opened it from the inside. I know because Miss Lane told me so. She was there when it happened." 'Miss Lane? Who is she?"

"Viola Lane, Dr. Speck's patient. That's all I know." "Brown hair, hazel eyes?"

"I believe so."

"So her name is Viola Lane? It's a nice name. It fits her, too. Did she tell you some one opened the

"She and the caretaker were in the hall, and she suddenly saw the door start to open. That's all she would tell me. I think she fainted after that. The fact remains that some one knows how to open the iron door safely from the inside at any rate."
"So it would seem, Pelly." Hannan's voice sounded a bit drowsy of a sudden. "Viola Lane, eh?"

"I have reason to think," said Mallingham in a cur-lously tense voice, "that the person who opened the iron

"You flatter me, Pelly. That would require almost su perhuman intelligence, wouldn't it?"

"No one is in a better position to know about these things than you are. I don't think I'm mistaken. You were the person. Martnet, I'm going to give you a chance for your life."

"I expected , ou were leading up to that all the time. The idea is, I suppose, that you will spare my life if I will show you how to operate the iron door?" "Precisely." Hannan gave an audible yawn. "But you see, Pelly my life isn't worth anything. I'm going to die, anyway and so are you.' "Maybe so, but before I pass away I'll have the satis laction of laughing at Old Winthrop's ghost. For that matter, it isn't positively certain that anybody is going to die-except you, unless you accede to my wishes. A miracle may happen."
